VOLUME XXIV.]

LEXINGTON, K. TUESDAY, OCTOBER 30, 1810.

[NUMBER 1307.]

THE KENTUCKY GAZETTE
IS PUBLISHED EVERY TUESDAY,
BY THOMAS SMITH,
SUCCESSOR TO DANIEL BRADFORD.

COND. TIONS.—Two Dollars per annum, paid in advance—or Three Dollars, if paid at the expiration of the year.

The postage on letters addressed to the Editor must be paid, or they will not be attended to.

The Printing Office is kept at the old stand, opposite the Branch Bank.

AT THE OFFICE OF THE KENTUCKY GAZETTE,
THE KENTUCKY
ENGLISH GRAMMAR, OR NEW
GRAMMATICAL INSTITUTE;

CONTAINING
A comprehensive system of English Grammar, in which the whole structure and essential principles of that most copious Language, according to the most approved modern standards, are concisely, yet completely exhibited, and explained in a manner intelligible to the weakest capacities.

By SAMUEL WILSON,

BRICE 25 CENTS SINGLE—$2 PER DOZEN.

JUST PUBLISHED And for Sale at this office, LETTERS

ADDRESSED TO THE
REV. T. B. CRAIGHEAD,
IN ANSWER TO A PAMPHLET LATELY PUBLISHED BY HIM, CONTAINING A SERMON ON REGENERATION, &c. &c.

By JOHN P. CAMPBELL.

IN these Letters a discussion of the following interesting and important subjects has been attempted:

1. The depravity of the Human Heart, and its effects in obstructing belief in the Gospel.
2. The Regeneration of the Heart, as effected by a Divine power accompanying truth.
3. Faith in Christ distinguished from a false Faith, and shown to be the product of a Divine operation.
4. The immediate Agency of the Spirit particularly considered.
5. The doctrines of Liberty and Necessity, and of Natural and Moral Inability in Man concisely treated. Some direct objections made to Mr. Craighead's theory.

Price 50 cents to subscribers, non-subscribers 62 1/2 cents—in consequence of a limited number of copies only being struck, and its exceeding the size contemplated by the author, whereby the sale of the whole at the subscription price, would be insufficient to defray expenses.

Subscribers are requested to call or send for their copies.
Mr. Craighead's pamphlet may also be had at this office. July 9th, 1810

JOHN METCALF, J. P. J. C.
January 16th, 1810.

HINTS FOR MENUTES.

Having read some strictures in the Oregonian on Dr. Fishback's Pamphlet, by a writer under the signature of Minutes, I hope to be pardoned for taking some notice of them, as they seem designed to impute the opinions of others as well as those of the person immediately assailed. The rudeness of his assault upon the Doctor recoils upon himself, and of course merits no answer farther than it goes to insinuate, that any such effort is an attempt to abuse mankind. Admitting that the Doctor's pamphlet should really have the tendency alleged by that gentleman, is nothing allowable to humanity? Was not the author fallible? Might he not err? even when he earnestly sought to serve the best interests of human kind. Charity would say it is possible, yet we see him denounced as an atheist in disguise, and all the zeal of the writer summoned to excite the prejudices of the public against him. I am really incapable of discerning in what way the belief that the knowledge we have of the being of a God is originally derived from revelation and not from the deductions of reason, can lead to atheism. The connecting links are too minute and palpable for my perception. I must have finer organs or some magnifying lens to enable me to trace them out if ever I come to the discovery. If this belief be the symbol of atheism, then will the role of infidelity be brightened by names the most illustrious in fame. In this view of things Daubeny, Pascal, Ellis, Cumberland, Jones, Robertson, Campbell, Watson, Jennings & Skinner (not to mention an host beside) are all atheists. For an accession of talents and fame to splendor, did infidelity will thank Minutes; and the boast that talents, erudition and philosophy are on the side of irreligion will no longer be an empty gratuitous assumption but a triumphant reality. It is thus that our writer of strictures, desecrates the temple of christian fame & hastens to adorn the gloomy fane of scepticism with some of the brightest lights of the literary world. Little more modest is the attempt to associate this opinion with the Pelagian, Socinian & Shaker heresies. This like the other allegation may have its use but certainly has no foundation in fact. It is indeed true that the follower of Pelagius & Socinus has sometimes contended that our knowledge of the existence of a Deity is an effect solely resulting from revelation; but it is easy to observe the reason of this unnatural association of ideas. For did he not adopt this opinion, there would be almost nothing to discriminate his system from what is called Deism. The doctrines of the Pelagian and Socinian accord in most points with those of the Deist; but the first ascribes the knowledge of those things to revelation which the last supposes have been attained by the efforts of human reason. It is on this principle only, that the importance of revelation can be discerned at all by persons of that cast of opinion. There is another reason for their adopting the doctrine in question? They deny that man ever was in a more perfect state than he is at present, and consequently are compelled to allow that his knowledge of the existence of a God is derived from revelation only; for if they should suppose that the heathens could arrive at the knowledge of a God by the few scattered rays of tradition which they enjoy, and the exercise of their own faculties, they would then have to yield their favorite position, that man is now as perfect as he ever was. But this very unwilling concession is at war with every other part of their system, which is evidently predicated upon the strength and vivacity of human reason, in securing the perfection and happiness of man by its own exertions. I have never been able to see, as some affect to do, that the opinion in question is a departure from the doctrines of the reformation. If I understand these doctrines, their whole tendency is to one great point;—that God is the author of every good and perfect gift;—and that man is completely and absolutely dependent; deriving every information, every perfection, and every blessing from his maker. If then, I believe that the world is indebted to God for the knowledge of himself, either by an existing revelation or by some faint rays derived from it by traditional information, serving to whet the human mind and rouse its attention to the notices of a Deity in nature; how does that belief deflect from the line of reformed doctrine? How do I Socinianize? much more how do I atheiz-

As I conceive, it is in perfect harmony with such doctrine and is conceived upon the same great principle of a pure theology, that is, dependence in man. It has as little connection with the creed of Pelagius or Crellius, with the principles of Shakers or Atheists, as it has with the doctrines of Zoroastre or Confucius. But there is another feature of humanity which no less than its dependence involves the doctrine contended for; I mean its darkness and blindness. When we consider the darkness, the opposition and pride of human nature, it is just such an effect as we might expect to see, "that the world by wisdom knew not God." It is very natural then that men who make depravity (as far as man is concerned) a first principle of theology, should believe that a creature so lost, so fallen, so darkened, a man, never would have originated the idea of a God by the mere unassisted efforts of his own reason. And so it is in fact, for we find that the opinion has been adopted by Secker, Mather, Edwards, Witherspoon, Clap, Willots, Hopkins, Nisbet, Scott and others. Minutes speaks of a new plan of inculcating truth which he says we are to adopt, and also of an old one which has prevailed since the days of St. Paul, which we are to reject at the request of Dr. Fishback. If to say that the world never would have struck out the idea of a God by the mere exercise of their own faculties, be what this gentleman calls the new plan, and declaring the opposite to be true, (the old one) there is reason to believe he knows very little of the history of theology. Besides the authors already mentioned or referred to there is the whole Hutchinsonian school, (among whom shines the celebrated Parkhurst) who to a man contend for the doctrine. But before these and at the head of an immortal phalanx rises the majestic author of Deism Revealed, who surveys the question in every important attitude. From that work, I select the following passage: "There never was a man known or heard of, who had an idea of God without being taught it—a man confined in a dungeon all his days, and deprived of all conversation with mankind, probably would not so much as once consider who made him or whether he were made or not, nor entertain the least notion of a God." The amiable Pascal, speaking of the futility & even danger of metaphysical proofs of the being of a God, observes: "For either they advance not so far as to know there is a God; or if they do, yet they arrive here at an unprofitable knowledge, because they frame to themselves a method of communicating with God without a mediator; so that they unavoidably fall either into atheism or deism, things which the Christian religion does almost equally detest and abhor." But this doctrine was not unknown to the christian father's some of whom contended that the knowledge of a God was not to be reached by human science. They knew too well the difficulty which attends the solution of the fundamental question, is there a God? to imagine it was really as accessible as some modern enquirers would have us believe. To this purpose is the observation of Clemens Alexadrinus—"God is the most difficult thing of all to be discoursed of; because, since the principle of every thing is hard to find out, the first and most ancient principle of all which was the course to all other things of their being made, must needs be the hardest of all to be declared or manifested." This is a perfectly clear idea as well as a strong one. If it be difficult to investigate common causes, how much more difficult to investigate the first cause; and especially when to the imperibility of human nature we add its corruption! Yet the doctrine, it is alleged, was not known to St. Paul. I am strongly inclined to think it was when I hear him peremptorily declare, that "the world by wisdom knew not God," and that "faith is the evidence of things not seen." Paul did not then as I apprehend think with Minutes, that the world from the operations of their own unassisted reason, however exalted or penetrating, could strike out the sublime, nay the immense idea of a God, or pierce the impervious curtain that shuts out the eternal world from the sight of men, so as to learn the existence of any unseen thing in that world, much more the invisible God, who is the greatest, the most unknowable of all unseen things. But St. Paul is thought to teach very clearly the opposite doctrine, in the 1st chapter of the Epistle to the Romans. Where I ask, does he teach in this chapter that the works of Creation, in our present blind condition, easily and clearly discover to us the being and attributes of God without aid or revelation or any traditional instruction? No where, I presume. "St. Paul" as the author of Deism Revealed very justly observes, "gives us quite another history of the business. He says, that from the creation, apokrisis, the invisible things of God are clearly seen, & afterwards through philosophy and the boasted wisdom of man, almost wholly lost, or changed into idolatry, worse in itself than even total ignorance. This seems plainly to intimate that our knowledge of God did not take its rise from mere reason, but from revelation." The words, from creation, mean from the era of creation, and not from the works of creating power as some suppose. The apostle meant to communicate that the invisible things were clearly seen or made known from the beginning, that is, by revelation, and that where this illumination obtains the system of nature, is clearly apprehended to be the product of a divine hand. Pascal has a fine comment on this and similar passages: "They who are enlightened by revelation immediately discern the whole system of things to be no other than the workmanship of that God whom they adore. To them the heavens declare his glory; the invisible things of him, being first understood by revelation, are clearly seen. But when that light is extinct, men see but clouds and darkness on the face of nature, and they are deaf to her voice." All the friends of revealed truth must acquiesce in some such view of this passage; for who will assert that the invisible things of Deity, even his eternal power and godhead, can be clearly seen, or as it is in the original perfectly discerned from the works of nature? Or if he does, will he not render revelation superfluous and teach the world to atheiz-

Once more Minutes places before us the example of the Greek philosophers as supporting his idea, tho' he had just before mentioned Protagoras as an atheist. "Long before the christian era," says he, "the Grecian philosophers resorted to the order and economy of nature to prove the existence of a Deity." Had this gentleman possessed a better acquaintance with the ancient history of philosophy he would not have hazarded anything so entirely unfounded. He would have seen Cicero declare that "those who study philosophy do not believe there are any Gods." He would have seen Lencipus, Democritus and Epicurus, nay whole sects of philosophers deny the very existence of a Deity. He would have seen the very best of them destitute of a knowledge of a God, as the first cause of all things, or the creator of the world as to matter and form, for they all, theists as well as atheists believed the eternity of matter, an eternal succession of causes. But let my statement should be thought questionable; I will once more resort to the authority of a philosopher of colossal fame, I mean the author of Deism Revealed. He thus speaks of several ancient philosophers beginning with Aristotle: "In his metaphysics he ascribes the belief of the Gods, and of this, that the deity comprehends and comprehends all nature, to a traditionary habit of speaking, handed down from the first men to after ages. Cicero, in his treatise concerning the nature of the Gods, introduces Cotta blaming those who endeavored by argumentation to prove there are Gods, and affirming that this only served to make the point doubtful, which, by the instructions and traditions of their forefathers, had been sufficiently made known to them, and established. Plutarch, speaking of the worship paid to a certain ideal divinity, which his friend had called in question, says, "It is enough to believe pursuant to the faith of our ancestors, and the instructions communicated to us in the country where we were born and bred; than which, we can neither find out, nor apply any argument more to be depended on." Thus we see that the most virtuous philosophers of antiquity relied on tradition & not on argument in order to the belief of a Deity. It is devoutly to be wished that Minutes may enlarge the circle of his reading and cultivate the sentiment of a generous and enlarged charity before he attempts to write again.

I shall for the present take my leave of him and all who have admired his strictures with the observations of a late eloquent writer. "Human reason would be muttering against the divine truth and holding up some semblance of religion as natural to man, which, therefore, it was not requisite for God to reveal; the discovery of which, we shall allow to be a natural enough consequence of the pride and vanity of the human heart. But the misfortune is, that this specious theory happens to be directly contrary to matter of fact; for if there be any truth in revelation, which those who talk so much of the connection between natural and revealed religion seem to acknowledge; nothing is more certain than that God spoke, or revealed his will to Adam in Paradise, and that too, as soon as he was created; a circumstance which cuts off all right of prudence in any other mode of discovery, and leaves no room for that imaginary system, the religion of nature."

FROM THE VIRGINIA ARGUS.

We generally find a disposition in the world to condemn a man who lives extravagantly, and we commonly reproach him with living beyond his means, with living upon the property of others, and so forth: whilst the man who is successful in trade, who gets rich, & on his riches move in a style of splendor, is admired, followed, and eulogized. Yet there is little difference, in reality, between these two characters. The individual who lives beyond his means, does, unquestionably, very unjustly live upon the property of others; but there is this palliation in it, that he thus expends the substance of other men by their consent, for if they would not trust him, he could not live beyond his means. The man, on the other hand, who lives upon wealth acquired in dealing, lives upon the advantages which he has obtained from other individuals; for what are profits, what the gains of trade, what the income of speculators but advantages which cunning men derive in their dealings from men less cunning? I do not speak here of fair dealing; of something sold for something bought of an equal value; but I allude to the gains which accrue from the artifices of shop-keeping, and of dealing, in general, the decline of which is not a reasonable advance on the article sold, as a compensation for trouble and labor, and risk; but which is, "as much as you can get." The profits accumulated in this way; or at least all that part of them over and above a fair premium for agency, are so much taken from sufferers without their consent, they not perceiving it, because it is done in a gradual manner, and in very small quantities; or extorted from their wants. To exemplify. Suppose a shop-keeper buys several hogsheds of sugar at nine cents per pound; we will allow him three cents per pound for his labor, risk, &c. which would bring it to twelve cents per pound. But the importation of this article is suddenly obstructed; or the supply for the town from some casualty falls short; and in consequence, the seller rises in his demand and requires fifteen cents per pound: the three cents additional would be as fraudulently obtained, as the same excess would be unjust in a man who, in that proportion, lived beyond his income.

If thus are our understandings deceived by money; and one man shall pick your pocket in one way, with applause and with impunity; whilst, if he were to do it in another way, he would be whipped, pilloried, or sent to the penitentiary. Wealth lords it over the human mind. It seems to be the lever that moves every thing. It vanishes vice; obscures virtue; elevates dulness; depresses talents; beautifies ugliness; scandalizes beauty. Can we wonder, when it thus commands every thing, that it should be so much courted—that men should forward in the pursuit of it in violation of every principle of honor? It is wealth that creates in our minds the difference between the man of profits and the man of extravagance. The man of profits has money, and we follow; the man of extravagance becomes poor, and we desert and condemn him. Young men if you have talents take care of your dollars; if you have no talents take care of your dollars?

FOREIGN.

FROM THE NATIONAL INTELLIGENCE.

The following is a hasty translation of a Decree of the New Government at Caracas, which we have just received. It would seem from this decree that the English government, while it is contending in Europe for the authority of the Regency at Cadiz, is endeavouring in America not only to profit by the revolutions taking place in the Spanish colonies in this quarter of the globe, but is actually tempting them to deviate from the orders of that Regency whose authority it professes to support.

THE SUPREME JUNTA.

Conservative of the rights of Sr. Don Ferdinand VII. in the provinces of Venezuela.

If the sacrifices which the generous British nation has made in the service of the unhappy monarch, whose rights Venezuela defends and preserves are entitled to the consideration of every good Spaniard; Caracas has, over and above these sacred obligations, others very immediate and imperious to prove the sincerity with which it has asked, and has a right to hope for, that protection from G. B. which may insure its political existence without directly or indirectly influencing its domestic institutions. Agriculture and commerce are the two pillars of our prosperity; but the political system of the other hemisphere, where our productions must be consumed, has given to Great Britain an influence over mercantile relations, as powerful in general as the duties which our gratitude to her, our geographical position, our political youth, and our industry, discouraged by the oppression we have thrown off, impose on us in particular. So many obstacles to our prosperity cannot be overcome without assistance, and this cannot be obtained without a reciprocity of sacrifice. In vain we shall open our ports to the other nations when this one alone possesses the trident of Neptune: in vain we shall cultivate the rich territory we possess, when she alone can carry to, or permit our productions to arrive at the markets of Europe; and in vain we should arm ourselves to defend our fire-rides from French rapacity, when she alone can shield from all foreign aggressions our immense extent of coast.

A commercial distinction in favor of a nation who possesses such power and who so much desires to favor our efforts is what may now secure such requisite and various services—and the government, when it agrees to this sacrifice, does it for no other purpose but the better to entitle American Spain to sacrifices on the part of Great Britain equal to those she has made in favor of European Spain.

Our liberality cannot be mistaken when it is seen that we deviate, in favor of this respectable ally, from the orders by which the regency, prohibiting our foreign commerce, would have ultimately deprived even Great Britain of the advantages which we offer her, to compensate for the benefit we promise ourselves from her protection, & to recompense her for what she has done for our valiant countrymen in Europe. Our own liberty is to be theegis of our preservation; as our patriotic indignation will be the rock on which will be wrecked all the projects which do not correspond with the liberality of our designs, if, as we ought not to expect, attempts should be made to take advantage of our situation. Under the incontrovertible principles of civil liberty, of moderation, of dignity—and subjecting to the sanction of the body conservative of the rights of Sr. Don Ferdinand the 7th, which is about to be installed, and to what our commissioners to His Britannic majesty may have directly stipulated, the provisional measures which circumstances may have required—the junta for the present has acceded to the proposition which, in the name of His Britannic majesty and in consequence of dispatches sent to the government of Caracas from London on the 29th of June last, has been made to it by Col. Robertson, Secretary of that government, granting in favor of the British nation a reduction of one fourth part of the duties which are now received from foreigners on their importations or exportations through our Custom Houses. Assured that in the respectable personal qualities of Col. Robertson and in his beneficent and decided sentiments in favor of our stability, Venezuela has a guarantee in addition to those which the high respectable origin of his mission insure to it.

Having agreed on its measures, the supreme junta has demanded that in the English colonies there should be, as to us, that reciprocal correspondence, which the generosity of our conduct dictates.

Our vessels must enjoy in the British ports of the Antilles the same privileges and tariff of duties, that the English do, and under our flag, from the publication of this decree, any thing purchased in our territory may be introduced there, although it is not the production of our country, provided that it is not prohibited in British vessels.

These equitable conditions have been accepted by Col. Robertson, authorised by his government to do so—and the Junta is satisfied that the general wish with which it has wished to exceed itself, in favor of British commerce, must immediately obtain for us in the island of Caracas those exemptions which several individuals have obtained by conduct less liberal than ours, until that sanction shall arrive from London, of which our proceeding and the favorable opinion of the commissioner assures us. Let this be understood in the Department of the Treasury and communicated to those to whom it belongs to act on it. Given at the palace of the government at Caracas on the 3rd of September, 1810.

(Signed)

TOVAR PONTE, President.
LOPEZ MENDEZ, Vice-Prest.

LONDON, Aug. 24.

We have received a letter from Dover, dated last night, which states that a constant firing was heard the day before from the batteries on the French coast. The cause of which has not been ascertained. Is Bonaparte on the coast, visiting Boulogne, Calais and other places on his way to Holland?

Intelligence of the 18th inst. has been received from Dunkirk, which states that Bonaparte has expressed his determination not to grant any licences for the importation of East India produce, before the 2d of November, or until the British government has made known its determination, with respect to the Orders in Council. There can be no difficulty or hesitation respecting them—and our ministers may notify that the enemy having declared his intention of revoking his decrees on the 1st of November, the operations of our orders in council consequent upon these decrees will cease from that day. As to abandoning the blockade of his ports, they will take no notice of that condition, which Bonaparte himself is perfectly sure we shall not comply with.

If he hope that he shall so ingratiate himself with America, as to induce her to go to war with us, we think he is not very likely to succeed—for what can the gain; or rather has she not every thing to lose by it? where are her means of annoyance? She could put an end to all intercourse with us. This mode of war she has already tried, and what did it produce? Nothing but injury to herself. Our West India Islands were not starved by it, as was predicted with such confidence and it enabled us to ascertain the full value of Nova Scotia and Canada.

This new born affection of Bonaparte for the Americans has afforded considerable surprise to those who recollect the contempt he has almost invariably expressed for them, and the insolent letter written in February last by Champagny to General Armstrong. It may be that he wishes to associate them in his designs upon South America. He finds that, whether he succeeds or not in old Spain, he is not likely to bring the Spanish possessions in South America under his yoke. Hence he is inviting them to throw off their allegiance, and while he is straining every nerve to reduce the mother country to slavery, he is trumpeting forth to her possessions in South America the inextinguishable blessings of liberty! The contiguity of the United States will, they may think, be of great use in carrying such a plan into execution; and he is cajoling and coaxing them "He always loved them; and their prosperity and commerce have always entered into the views of his policy!"

TOULON FLEET.

Extract of a letter from an officer on board one of His B. Majesty's ships cruising off Toulon, dated July 9th 1810.

"Six or seven sail of the enemy's line come out every day, but as soon as our inshore squadron give them chase, they immediately run in again. Seven sail were out to day; our signal was made for a general chase, and had the wind not continued fair for their return for an hour and a half, we should have been able to bring them to action." The letter then adds a list of the fleet in Toulon, which consists of three ships of 120 guns, and 1200 men each; 9 seventy-fours, with 700 men each; 6 forty-fours and 3 frigates of thirty-six. Besides those there are in the inner harbor the Wagram, just launched, of 120; two 80 and one 74. There are likewise a number of small vessels.

Admiral Gantheaume, who was commander in chief, has gone to Paris.

Extract of a letter from an American gentleman in Liverpool to his friend in Portsmouth, N. H. dated Aug. 5, 1810.

"A succession of failures has taken place within the last six months in this country, which perhaps has never in so short an interval, been equalled. The shock commenced at the head of the commercial system. In London, six hundred and seventy-one failures have taken place, some singly from one to three millions sterling. Many of these are private banks of immense concerns, whose paper formed the basis of speculation. That of De Hays, which was announced on the 3d inst. is one of the largest in the kingdom. Two in the neighborhood of Liverpool have sunk, and among the failures of this immense depot of trade, is one of one million and another of 450,000 sterling. The intimate connection of London with this place, and indeed with every part of England, has given rise to a general want of confidence—Do not believe our embargo caused this country no injury here is direct, irrefragable proof that it did—and well informed men are now willing to acknowledge that this heavy game would have been played off last year, had not the non-intercourse law set afloat, by the revival of hazardous enterprise, the almost sinking credit of embargo speculators."

PHILADELPHIA, October 10.
FROM MEXICO.

We have seen a gentleman just arrived from Vera Cruz (Mexico) who informs, that the Viceroy of Mexico had supplied the gov. of Maracaybo with money, arms, and ammunition, for the purpose of resisting the rebels of Caracas, whom it was determined to reduce to submission. The Balwar 74 gun ship was on the eve of sailing for Spain with the deputies on board from Mexico to the Spanish Cortes, and was to touch at Havana to take on board the deputies from Cuba. The Mexicans had despatched two ships laden with gun powder (manufactured in Mexico) as a present to the Spanish Patriots of the mother country, and has subscribed 20,000,000 dollars to be sent to them shortly.

Accounts from Canton (China) dated March 20, state, that 80 Ladorne junks with 20,000 men, under a female chief of great distinction, surrendered to the Chinese government. The plunder they had, was divided among the Ladornes who returned home, and the junks were kept by the government. The Ladornes chieftain was stated to be at Macao with 300 junks and 30,000 men, offering terms to the Chinese for surrendering.

THE ISLAND OF CUBA.

There have for some time been two parties in this place—one ostensibly of Ferdinand; but governed in fact by a British faction—the other, for Independence. We have what appears to be very direct and authentic information, that the party for Independence has become predominant. It is treading in the steps of the inhabitants of the Floridas. We shall, in all probability, hear more and be able to give particulars. This must be good news for America. In every great national point of view, we have much to anticipate and nothing to apprehend from the Independence of our neighbors in this western hemisphere.

BOST. PAT.

PRESENT STATE OF HAYTI.

We learn from a gentleman who left Port au Prince, in the latter end of August last, the following particulars relative to the existing state of affairs in that country at the time of his departure.

The Mole was still in possession of the troops of Petion, under the command of Gen. Veillard, (who succeeded Lamarre) but closely besieged by the army, and blockaded by the fleet of Christophe. It was supposed to contain provisions for 3 or 4 months, but the general opinion was, that it could not hold out longer than that time. This position is the only one now occupied by Petion in the northern departments of the islands and should it fall, the whole military force of Christophe will no doubt be turned against the south.

The advanced posts of Christophe, extend to l'Arcahaie, which is only about fifteen miles from Port au Prince, the capital of Petion's dominions. This city would afford a powerful obstacle to the conquests of Christophe, as it is nearly surrounded by a strong wall and entrenchment lately constructed, should not treason find its way amongst the inhabitants. Unanimity is wanting. The people are mostly divided into factions. One party is attached to the president, another is desirous of placing Rigaud at the head of the government, and a third is suspected of being in favor of Christophe. If these conflicting sentiments continue to prevail, Port au Prince must fall.

Gen. Rigaud, from whose talents, energy and popularity so much was expected, was laying sick at Jeremie.

Gen. Gomoy had not surrendered with his army to Rigaud, as was reported, but was still in a state of open hostility against the authority of Petion, with a force of about 5 or 6000 men. A negotiation had in reality been opened, and a personal interview took place between the two chiefs, but without producing any amicable arrangement. Gomoy is a negro, as such is opposed to the influence of the mulattoes, and has declared himself to be in the interest of Christophe.

Should this statement be entirely correct, after the reduction of the Mole, the conquest of the south will most probably follow, for as the war has assumed very much the character of a war of color, and as the blacks are much more numerous than the mulattoes, disaffection will more generally prevail amongst the troops of the south, who are principally black. We should not be surprised to see in a short time the same horrible system of extermination practised by the negroes against the people of colour, which was formerly put into execution by them jointly against the unfortunate whites. It has already been commenced by Christophe within three or four years, during which time a great number of influential and important men of colour at the Cape, and elsewhere, have been sacrificed to his zealous resentment.

In addition to the above statement, we have seen a letter from the Cape, dated in the latter end of August, wherein it is confidently asserted that from the active operations then carried on against the Mole by Christophe, it could not hold out longer than ten days. This calculation, however, we presume is premature, as it differs so materially from the account from Port au Prince, which may be considered as that of the besieged.

Extract of a letter from Port au Prince, dated Sept. 12.

"An attack was made about the last of August, by the army of Christophe, on the Mole. Gen. Veillard who succeeded Gen. Lamarre in the command of the Mole, repulsed the enemy with great loss; they lost on the field 600 men, 2 amongst whom were four general officers. Gen. Veillard is a young officer of great courage and conduct—and there is no doubt of his being able to maintain the place against Christophe. The Mole has four months provisions, and the garrison in high spirits. Gen. Petion is preparing to march against Cape Francois, which I flatter myself will terminate the power of that monster Christophe, who, I find by some of your late papers, has, through some of his base agents, published accounts of victories he never gained, having for a considerable time lost every battle he has fought with our brave army.

Gen. Regaud is at Cornil, in good health. There is no doubt of his success in conciliating the dissatisfied in that quarter: he is much beloved by all the people, and the president and himself are on the most confidential and amicable terms. I hope my dear friend, that under the auspices of those two good and great men, our country will enjoy that pure happiness we have so much wished for; and strangers that security, which will induce them to carry on a mutually profitable commerce."

It is said (says the London Public Ledger of Aug. 27) that the treaty recently concluded between Bonaparte and the Emperor of Austria, obliges the latter to place at the disposal of his Son-in-law, a body of troops not exceeding 50,000 men, which may be employed in any part of the Continent, as the exigencies of the war may require.

Preparations for receiving Bonaparte in Holland are great, and on a scale of expense that will bear heavy on the inhabitants of Amsterdam. Several houses have been raised for the purpose of enlarging and improving the view from the Palace.

On board the Mediterranean fleet, which is about to sail from Portsmouth, there are about 6000 troops destined as reinforcements for the Peninsula, Sicily, &c.

The importations into Liverpool, of flour from America, and particularly of wheat from the Baltic, still continue very considerable, this with the promising aspect of the harvest, is likely to produce a speedy reduction in the price of grain.

The accounts from Lisbon received in England are only to the 8th August. You will perceive the paper contains no news.

Translated from a Hamburg paper of the 25th of June, 1810.

"VIENNA, June 14.
Our celebrated physician de Carro, has by many trials made the certain discovery, that the preserved and dried scabs of the king pock, even after several years, will produce the genuine king pock, and that in consequence the liquid fluid, which is often difficult to be obtained, may be entirely dispensed with. The dried scab is pulverised and a very little thereof put on the lancet, previously moistened with spittle, and infused under the upper skin. The obvious advantage thereof is, that the dried scab can in this way be conveyed in letters to the most distant countries."

LEXINGTON OCTOBER 30.

The following is the only article of news received by yesterday's mail.

[From the National Intelligencer Extra.]

LONDON.—

SIR—Lord Wellesley sent me, yesterday, his answer to my note of the 25th ult. respecting the Berlin & Milan decrees.

I hasten to transmit a copy of it. A copy shall be sent without delay to Gen. Armstrong.

WM. PINKNEY.

Hon. Robert Smith, &c. &c.

COPY.

Mr. Pinkney's Letter to Lord Wellesley.

Great Cumberland Place, Aug. 25, 1810.

MY LORD—All I have the honor to state to your Lordship that I have received from Gen. Armstrong, Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States at Paris, a letter bearing date the 5th inst. in which he informs me, that the government of France had revoked the decrees of Berlin and Milan, and that he has received a written and official notice of the fact, in the following words: "Je suis autorise a vous declarer, monsieur, que les Decrets de Berlin et de Milan, sont revokes, et qu' a dater du 1er Novembre ils cesseront d'avoir leur effet."

I take for granted that the revocation of the British Orders in Council of January and November 1807, and April 1809, and of all other orders dependent upon, analogous to, or in execution of them, will follow of course; and I shall hope to be enabled by your lordship, with as little delay as possible, to announce to my government that such revocation has taken place.

I have the honor to be, with high consideration, my Lord, your Lordship's most obedient humble servant, (Signed) WM. PINKNEY.

The most noble the Marquis Wellesley, &c. &c.

Copy.

Lord Wellesley to Mr. Pinkney.

SIR—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter under date the 25th inst.

On the 23d of February, 1803, his majesty's minister in America declared to the government of the United States, "his majesty's earnest desire to see the commerce of the world restored to that freedom which is necessary for its prosperity, and his readiness to abandon the system, which had been forced upon him, whenever the enemy should retract the principles which had rendered it necessary."

I am commanded by his majesty to repeat that declaration, and to assure you that whenever the repeal of the French decrees shall have actually taken effect, and the commerce of neutral nations shall have been restored to the condition in which it stood previously to the promulgation of those decrees, his majesty will feel the highest satisfaction in relinquishing a system, which the conduct of the enemy compelled him to adopt.

I have the honor to be, with the highest consideration, sir, your most obedient servant,

Signed WELLESLEY.

JESSAMINE CIRCUIT COURT.

INNES vs. STREET.

ACTION ON A LIBEL.

It will be recollected, that during the publication of the Western World, charges of a treasonable nature were exhibited in that paper against a number of the first settlers and most respectable citizens of this state; amongst whom Judge Innes was particularly assailed—which produced an action against Joseph M. Street, Esq. the editor, for a libel. After a lengthy and interesting trial, which occupied several days, the jury brought in a verdict for the plaintiff—damages, $ 850.—A motion was made for a new trial on the ground of the absence of two material witnesses—decision on the motion deferred till the next session of the Court.

A sketch of the trial would have been offered, but the proceedings were taken down at the time, and it is presumed will be shortly published entire.

Brown, the late collector of New-Orleans, and who some time since absconded with 40 or 50 thousand dollars, public money, is said to have returned to the United States—and is now at Washington City.—The Nat. Intelligencer says he came there "voluntarily and expressly for the purpose of surrendering himself to government."

A very destructive fire broke out in Charleston on the night of the 17th of this month—it commenced at 11 o'clock and continued with unabating fury until 3, and consumed about 300 houses, in a S. E. direction from St. Philip's church, where it first began, down to the Exchange.

The Catholic Synod of Ireland have published a Latin address to the "Catholic prelates and dignitaries of the whole world, protesting against the violence offered by the French Emperor to the person and rights of Pope Pius VII."

The Maryland representation in the 12th Congress, will consist of 6 republicans and 3 federalists, the same as at present.—In the house of Delegates the republicans have a majority of 16.

A QUIP.—A Russellville paper, says, "there is in the press an address from Col. Lyon to the members of the Legislature of Kentucky, in which he offers his services as a SENATOR in CONGRESS"—The Green River Editor is certainly quizzing Matthew.

It is said that a machine for ironing clothes has been invented by a citizen of Durham, N. Hampshire, for which a patent has been obtained—it will in half an hour, attended and worked by one person only, iron as many clothes as two women do in a day—and what is not less astonishing, the process is without heat.

Arrived at Baltimore, schr. Hazard, 24 days from Kingston (Jam.)—All MIRANDA'S MEN have been set at liberty by the new government of the Spanish Main, six of them had arrived at Jamaica. All others who had been imprisoned under the old government, were also set at liberty.

Capt. Dameron, of the schooner William and John, arrived in Baltimore, in 23 days from Lagaira, via St. Croix, informs, that there was a brig of war off Lagaira, which boards all vessels bound in, some even within a quarter of a mile of the anchorage ground. His schooner was boarded by her and treated politely. He touched at Rasse End St. Croix, Sept. 18, where he learnt that several American vessels, bound from ports on the Main, in the revolted provinces, were captured by privateers from Porto-Rico. He was bound to Porto-Rico, but upon this information he changed his voyage. The names of the vessels captured, or to what ports they belonged, capt. D. did not learn.

WASHINGTON CITY, Oct. 12.

The following is an extract of a letter from a respectable commercial character in Bristol, (Eng.) dated August 17, 1810. "The prospect of our wheat harvest has by no means improved, the weather having been very wet and windy."

NEW-YORK, Oct. 10.

Captain Brown, passenger in the brig Matilda, Arnold, from Lagaira, informs, that the brig Jane, Smart, arrived at Lagaira from Carraccas, on the 6th of Sept.

On the Morning of the 7th, capt. Smart hoisted his colours, as usual, viz. ensign, pendant, and jack, and went on shore.—Soon after a boat from the British brig of war Challenger, Capt. Rider, was sent along side, and an officer went on board, who ordered the pendant to be taken down, which the mate refused to do, and the officers of the Challenger pulled it down by force. About 12 o'clock, Capt. Smart returned on board his brig, and after learning the cause of the pendant's being struck, ordered it to be hoisted again. This being perceived by the Challenger, a boat with several armed men was again sent, and the colours were again forcibly taken down.—Captain Smart was seized and carried on board the Challenger, and from thence on shore, under a strong guard, to the commandant, who after an explanation ordered capt. Smart to be immediately released; but informed him at the same time that no merchant vessel would be allowed to wear a pendant in port.

Capt. Arnold confirms the above statement; and informs that duties on imports and exports were lessened one-fourth in British bottoms; and that the government of Carraccas have prohibited the slave trade.

FROM SPANISH AMERICA.

Capt. Dawson, who arrived this morning from Cartagena, reports that there were disturbances in the interior of the Spanish provinces. He is unacquainted with particulars—being only informed that a partial engagement had taken place in which the "Independents" of St. Fee had repulsed an advanced detachment of the "loyal" Mexicans. Both armies marshal ostensibly under the patriotic banners of Ferdinand VII.

Capt. D. brought three (1 white, two black) of Miranda's men.

A very large PUMPKIN is advertised for exhibition in Baltimore. It weighs 170 pounds, and is 7 feet 2 inches in circumference!

PRIVATE TUITION.

THE subscriber begs leave to inform the young ladies and gentlemen of Lexington, that he will wait on them at their several dwellings, in order (if they see proper) to instruct them in a scientific knowledge of the English language, by which they may be enabled to read the best authors, with pleasure and profit; to speak with propriety and elegance, and to compose with ease and accuracy. He will likewise instruct them in that beautiful and most essential branch of education—geography—with the use of maps and globes. He, the subscriber, having furnished himself with an elegant pair of Barlow's new British Globes, on the terrestrial globe which are delineated with great accuracy the late discoveries of Capt. Cooke, Vancouver and de la Parouse.

FRENCH SCHOOL.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the public, that he intends to open a night school the first Monday in November next. He is engaged in his profession with a solemn feeling of its sacred and important duties, it is the subscriber's intention not to take more pupils than he can do justice to, in all the allotted paths of French literature.

The French language has become so general, commercial relations are so continually multiplying between France and the United States, and the great interest which political events excite, draws the attention of our politicians, our men of letters, and our youth, so much towards this agreeable language, that the subscriber should be highly gratified in promoting a more general taste for such a polite language.

Ladies may have private lessons. The principles and mode of teaching of the subscriber may be made known by applying to the Gentlemen Trustees and Faculty of Transylvania University.

STOLEN

ON Saturday the 27th day of October, out of Jesse Perkins' stable, living within one mile of Lexington, a dark chestnut sorrel STUD HORSE, about 15 hands high, four years old, no mark recollected, very apt to stumble. TEX DOLLARS reward will be given to any person that will deliver the said horse to Jonathan Alexander, living within 7 miles of Lexington, nearly on the Limestone road, or give information so that I get him again, shall receive the above reward by

THOMAS NELSON.

Washington county, Ten. Oct. 27th, 1810.

ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD!

RAN away from the Kentucky Hotel on Saturday night last, two negro men named WILLIS & GEORGE. Willis is a mulatto, forty-five year of age, about six feet high, strait and neatly formed, a little inclined to be bow-legged, a carpenter by trade, but has of late been employed as a waiter. He is the property of Gen. Geo. Matthews, by whom he was purchased last winter of Maj. Burr Powell, Loudon county, Virginia, where it is probable he will endeavour to go, as he has a wife and children in that country, or to the state of Ohio.

George is a very black fellow, thirty years of age, about five feet ten or eleven inches high, round shoulders, very small eyes, large mouth, and inclined to laugh when spoken to; he has been accustomed to the sea; he is the property of Mr. Wm Ward, Scott county, of whom he was hired as a waiter.

The above reward will be paid for both the above fellows, or fifty dollars for either of them, if delivered in Lexington, together with all expenses—by

JOHN P. WAGNON.

October 23d, 1810.

N. B. The yellow fellow, Willis, was dressed in tight buck-skin pantaloons, and a blue coat-tee with white cape. George took with him several articles of clothing. J. P. W.

TEN DOLLARS REWARD—STRAYED OR STOLEN

FROM the subscriber of the 1st of this instant, a BROWN HORSE, five years old, fifteen and a half hands high, well made, one hind foot white, a few white hairs in his forehead, a natural trotter. POETRY.

Extract from Shenstone's much admired
"Pastoral ballad," in four parts—
(this from part II.)

My banks that are furnish'd with bees,
Whose murmur invites one to sleep;
My grottoes are shaded with trees,
And my hills are white-over with sheep.
I seldom have met with a loss,
Such health do my fountains bestow;
My fountains all border'd with moss,
Where the hare-bells and violets grow.

Not a pine in my grove is there seen,
But with tendrils of wood-bine is bound;
Not a beech's more beautiful green,
But a sweet-briar entwines it around.
Not my fields, in the prime of the year,
More charms than my cattle unfold;
Not a brook that is limpid and clear,
But it glitters with fishes of gold.

One would think she might like to retire,
To the bow'r I have labour'd to rear;
Not a shrub that I heard her admire,
But I hasted and planted it there.
O how sudden the jessamine strove
With the lilac to render it gay!
Already it calls for my love
To prune the wild branches away.

From the plains, from the woodlands and groves,
What strains of wild melody flow!
How the nightingale warble their loves,
From thickets of roses that blow!
And when her bright form shall appear,
Each bird shall harmoniously join
In a concert so soft and so clear,
As—she may not be fond to resign.

I have found out a nest for my fair;
I have found out the wood pigeons breed;
But let me this plunder forbear,
She will stay 'twas a barbarous deed.
For he never could be true, she aver'd,
Who could rob a poor bird of its young;
And I lov'd her the more when I heard
Such tenderness fall from her tongue.

I have heard her with sweetness unfold
How that pity was due to—a dove;
That it ever attended the bold;
And she call'd it the sister of love.
But her words such a pleasure convey,
So much I her accents adore,
Let her speak, and whatever she say,
Methinks I should love her the more.

LIFE. A SONNET.

This life's a pretty thing enough,
If 'twas but manag'd right;
The roads are sometimes highly rough,
And then again they're light.
However rough they'er may be,
'Tis sinful to complain;
A heart that's innocent and free
Can smooth them down again.

'Tis like a journey, when we roam
With anxious thoughts abroad—
Returning to our native home,
Fond home relieves the load.

THE SENSITIVE PLANT.

Oh would we mortals oft'n'er deign to look
In Nature's wise but intelligible book!
In every page, instruction guides her pen,
And points a moral, for the use of men.

This little plant, how cautiously it meets
Th' approaching hand; advance, and it retreats!
See how it flies from the suppos'd disgrace,
And shrinks from contact of the rude embrace!

So Wisdom, folly should forever shun;
So Virtue, from the touch of Vice, should run;
So female beauty should from flattery fly,
And spurn the incense of the gilded lie.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LONGEVITY.

The Alexandria Advertiser contains an account of one Philip Peter Scholl, who lives about 5 miles from Alexandria in Fairfax county, and is in the 107th year of his age. He was born near Mannheim in Germany, in the year 1763, and arrived at Philadelphia when 26 years old. When he first knew Alexandria it was called Bell-Haven, and had but one house in it. His wife, one year younger than himself, died at the age of 101, and within a year he married again a woman of the age of 45. He had nine or ten children by his first wife and none by his present. In his mode of life he eats and drinks anything, wine or sweetened whiskey and water, more particularly; he will eat very hearty meals, and then diet on milk or water for two or three days. He was never sick, except now and then an attack of the rheumatism. His hearing is very little impaired, and his memory is good, although not so retentive within the last twenty years as formerly. He never used spectacles until four or five years ago. He will mount a horse as quick and walk as far as most men. He is about 5 feet eight inches high, and carries his head erect; he is very talkative and facetious, & demands always a pint of wine for telling his age, and convinces that he can live yet a hundred years to come.—What a patriarch!

Monday's evening, the trial of W. Old came on in the Court of Exchequer, at Edinburgh, on the charge of having in his possession a still, for the purpose of manufacturing spirits, without having taken out a licence, which subjected him to a penalty of 500l.; also for having a wash, amounting to between 300 and 400 gallons, the penalty for which is 10l. per gallon; the libel was, however, restricted to 100 gallons, the penalty being 1000l. In both these sums he was found liable by the jury.

The ingenuity displayed by Mr. Old, in the erection of this still, and in the concealment of it, is rather of a novel nature and deserves to be made public. The still was of very large dimensions, not less than 60 gallons, equal to many used in the regular distilleries. Old's story is shortly this:—Some time ago he met with a travelling Irish tinker; he called him into his shop, which is situated in the High street, at the back of the Fountain Well, Edinburgh, and asked him if he ever made such an instrument as a still? The man told him that he could not only make it, but use it. He then made an appointment to meet the tinker in Charlotte square, where he blindfolded him, & carried him in a coach to his shop; he then introduced him into a cellar, by a trap door, in a dark room, through which he passed from the front to the back shop—this door was neatly concealed by a small press, and the passage was so tight, that a man could scarcely pass through it. Here he provided his tinker with copper, who, in a short time, constructed a still upon the most approved principles; after which he again blindfolded him, and set him adrift in a different quarter of the town. How long this instrument was at work did not appear on trial; but it is evident that a very short time would enable the proprietor to meet all expenses, or to pay any penalty he might incur.—For his spirits he found a ready market; his customers sent their servants with ready cash for what they wanted, consequently no names appeared, and he procured a total ignorance of who they were.

Such was the ingenuity with which Mr. Old had contrived to conceal his operations, that the officers, even after receiving information, had the greatest difficulty in finding out where the still was concealed.—London Globe.

TURNPIKES.

The first Turnpike in England was authorized by an act of Ch. 2, 1663, but the system was not adopted with spirit, until near the middle of the last century. The manufacturing inland towns in Great Britain, such as Manchester, Leeds, Halifax, &c. chiefly carried on their business through the medium of travelling pedlars, and afterwards on pack horses. The journey in this manner, from Manchester to London, occupied a fortnight; and it was not unusual for a trader, going the first time himself on this expedition, to take the prudent precaution of making his will. At present the mail stage performs the journey, in about a day and a half. In the beginning of this century (as Dr. Aikin in his history of Manchester observes) it was thought a most arduous undertaking to make a public road over the hills that separate Yorkshire and Lancashire: now, they are pierced by 3 navigable canals. Indeed the prosperous state of British manufactures and commerce, seems to have originated and progressed with the adoption of turnpikes and canals. They facilitate not merely the carriage and interchange of heavy materials, necessary to machinery; but they make personal intercourse cheap, speedy and universal; they thus furnish the means of feeling and communicating improvements, and of observing in that way how one manufacture may be brought to bear upon another, widely different in its kind.

We are not yet sufficiently aware of their importance in America, even to the interests of agriculture.—Raleigh Reg.

British Newgate Calendar.

By the public Journals in London, it appears, that in the space of 50 years, viz—from 1749 to 1800 in London and Middlesex only, no less than 1724 persons have suffered death from the hands of the executioner, for the offences detailed below—a list at which humanity must shudder with horror:

Murder	131
Shooting at persons	5
rape	1
Unnatural crime	4
Rioting and house breaking	332
Highway robbery	410
Shop lifting, &c.	479
Horse stealing	39
Stealing in dwelling houses	5
Stealing letters	2
Defrauding creditors	9
Robbery on the Thames	10
Piracy	8
Forgery	134
Coining	57
Personating to obtain prize money	11

The Forsyth Patent Gun-Lock.—The principle of this lock is different from the common gun-lock. It produces inflammation by means of percussion, and supercedes the use of flints. Its chief advantages are the following: The rapid and complete inflammation of the whole charge of gun-powder in the chamber of the barrel; the prevention of the loss of force through the touch-hole; perfect security against rain or damp in the priming; no flash from the pan, and less risk of an accidental discharge of the piece, than when the common lock is used. It has been in general use for two seasons, and very highly approved of by the most eminent sportsmen in this country.

If, as it is often asserted, and as many circumstances indicate, Bonaparte is in no small degree under petticoat government; and if, as it has been publicly announced, the Empress is in a growing condition; it would be well for some one to put it into his head that she is longing for peace. This being an attainable object, and Bonaparte being ever ready to obey her wishes, such a happy event may thus be produced. Desirous as he is for an heir, nothing, in his power to accomplish, would be neglected.

KNOXVILLE, SEPT. 22.

By a gentleman just from the Mobile country, we learn the following facts:

About the middle of August, orders from the secretary of the war department arrived at the post of Fort Stoddard, commanding col. Richard Sparks to detach two commissioned officers, four noncommissioned, and twenty privates, to form two companies for the purpose of exploring the country between that place and Highwasee, taking a survey of the distance, and learning every particular they possibly can, respecting soil, growth, water, &c.

Captain E. P. Gaines, who has formerly been employed by the government on similar excursions, we understand, takes command of one of the parties. This gentleman, it is said, is eminently calculated to do justice to his appointment. He follows the dividing ridge between the waters of the Bigby and Alabama—from thence to the ridge which divides the waters of the Black Warrior or Tuscaloosa, from those of the Coosa, and pursues this last until it is lost in the great dividing ridge lying between the waters of Tennessee and Mobile—from this last he is to strike the Highwasee, ascend it to the last notable point, cross the ridge dividing the Highwasee from the Conatago, in such place as will afford the shortest & best portage to a boatable point on the latter—from this last point he commences the long wished for survey of the Alabama. At this place the captain is to be met by the second party, who pursue from the Alabama the common path to Highwasee, through the Creek nation and Cherokee. What officer will conduct the second party, was not learnt when our informant came away. The parties were to start about the first of September from Fort Stoddard.

CHARLESTON, Oct. 1.

On Saturday last was committed to the jail in this city, under a warrant from James Bentham, Esq. James Warren Oliver, for robbing the Mail of the United States. It appears that Oliver had been employed in driving the mail between Georgetown and Santee Ferry for some years past, and that he was considered as among the most confidential drivers on that line. Three mails sent from this city on the 6th, 22d, and 25th August last, for Fayetteville, were discovered by the Post-master at that place to be missing; as was also the mail which should have reached this city on the 15th Sept. These facts having come to the knowledge of the post-master in this place, he communicated the same to Mr. Cottoff, the contractor. This latter gentleman, who displays a highly laudable zeal in the execution of the duties of his contract, from certain circumstances, suspected Oliver to be the person guilty of the robbery; and as he had just set out under leave, on a journey to visit his relations in North Carolina, Mr. Cotton determined on immediately pursuing him, with the assistance of some of the contractors and others he was enabled to overtake him a few miles this side of Raleigh, in North Carolina. When he was overtaken, about six or seven hundred dollars were found upon him, a part of his plunder. He has since made a full confession of the facts attending his robbery.

Power of Fashion.—The following anecdote will show, in a striking manner, the influence of fashion, (and in this instance, a most ridiculous fashion,) over the human mind.

A gentleman of large fortune fell violently in love with a lady, much inferior to him in point of property, but far superior in intellectual talents. He addressed her for some time with a zeal becoming her merits. But at length she told him the never could consent to marry him, till she had required a sacrifice, which she feared would be infinitely too great for him to make. If it be half my estate, said he, it shall cheerfully be laid upon the altar of love. That said the lady, is but a trifle to what I am about to demand. If you would have the whole of my fortune, and myself for your slave, replied the suitor, I will not demur.—It is more than all that, said the fair damsel.—Name your terms, name your terms! cried the impatient lover.—Bid me wage war with giants, or fight the fierce lions of the desert; and my love for you shall make me victorious; Nay, order me to the Indies, to China, or Japan, and you shall be obeyed. The sacrifice is still greater than all that, said the lady. For compassion's sake then, cried he in despair, tell me what it is! It is no less than this, said she, that you have off your monstrous whiskers, that I may have the pleasure of beholding your face!—My whiskers! cried he in astonishment! my whiskers! O heavens! No, madam, be it known, I will not part with my whiskers, to obtain the heart and hand of any daughter of Adam, now existing on the face of the earth. Charleston Times.

Patent and Family Medicines

PREPARED BY

MICHAEL LEE & Co.
BALTIMORE.

For the preservation of health and cure of diseases, the following celebrated Medicines are confidently recommended, viz.

Lee's Anti-Bilious Pills.

For the prevention and cure of Bilious and Malignant Fevers.

The operation of these pills is perfectly mild—so as to be used with safety by persons in every situation, and of every age.

They are excellently adapted to carry off superfluous bile, and prevent its morbid secretions—to restore and amend the appetite, produce a free perspiration, and thereby prevent colds, which are often of fatal consequences—a dose never fails to remove a cold, if taken on its first appearance. They are celebrated for removing habitual costiveness—sickness at the stomach and severe head ache—and ought to be taken by all persons on a change of climate.

They have been found remarkably efficacious in preventing and curing disorders attendant on long voyages, and should be procured and carefully preserved for use by every seaman.

Lee's Worm-Destroying Lozenges.

This medicine is superior to any ever offered to the public, being innocent and mild, certain and efficacious in its operations. Should no worms exist in the body, it will, without pain or griping, cleanse the stomach and bowels of whatever is foul or offensive, and thereby prevent the production of worms and many fatal disorders.

Lee's Elixir.

A certain remedy for colds, coughs, asthma's, and particularly the whooping cough, for defructive to children.
